

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

utilized as an individual matter; as a social factor it has been overlooked or totally neglected. It has never once occurred to a single one of the falsely so-called great Christian nations to apply the eternal principles of Christ in solving either national or international problems. The idea has somehow prevailed that when nations are dealing with each other it is a game of grab and hold by force. They have sought to exploit each other. The idea of even cold, calculating justice has been suppressed. The great Christian conception of common human brotherhood has not occurred to the nations. So they have built armaments. Science has been taxed to the utmost limits in devising instruments of destruction.

But usually it takes suffering and sorrow to wake us up, and now we are waking up in very truth. Those who see far and wide are beginning to see what our fathers ought to have seen long ago. The teachings and example of our Lord are for the healing and happiness of the nations. The indications now are that at last Christianity is to have a fair trial. Such, we believe, is the thesis of Dr. Brown's book. He sustains it with cogency and power. He is always sane, avoiding, for example, the extremes of both the militarists and the pacifists and pointing out difficulties in the way of the league of nations. The central position of the church assures her, if she is wise, the leadership of the great nations to the realization of the Kingdom of God. Moreover, we are not shut up to present resources, powerful as they are. "But God has other workers still to enlist, and new powers still to release, and these in time—if we but do our part—will make accomplishment certain, and usher in the new social order for which the world still waits."

These lectures were delivered in Japan, and ought to have a wholesome influence in counteracting the baleful effects of jingoism both in Japan and in America.

Davis: Soldier-Missionary. By J. Merle Davis. Boston: Pilgrim Press, 1916. Pp. 347. $1.50.

The title expresses the extent of the subject's work and experience. Dr. Davis was born in New York of New England stock. In his early boyhood his father moved to Dundee in northern Illinois. Here he made his way through the district school, taught, and became a student at Beloit College. In the middle of his course he responded to his country's call, served with distinction through the Civil War, becoming a colonel. Then he returned to Beloit, after graduation went through the Chicago Theological Seminary, served as pastor, and finally found himself in Japan, where he was to do his greatest work. Missionary work in Japan still in the early seventies was in the face of almost insurmountable obstacles. By nature Dr. Davis was an evangelistic educator—a rare and much-needed combination. So he soon felt the necessity of higher education if real Christian progress was to be made among the Japanese. Previously he had met at Amherst Joseph H. Neesima, whose thrilling story is here briefly told. Through the co-operation of these two men the Doshisha was founded, and in the story of Dr. Davis' life we have a stirring history of the early struggles, the growth, the later perilous struggles, and the ultimate triumph of that great school.

The problems that Dr. Davis had to meet in connection with the school after it had become well established were more perplexing than those at the beginning. The danger came from the department of physical science. The teachers became exclusive specialists, and then gradually lost interest in the spiritual side of education, and some of them became out-and-out atheists. It looked sometimes as if all were lost. The death of Dr. Neesima was a severe blow. But the soldier in Dr. Davis served him well at this critical juncture—and through the years many a hard-fought battle was won. At last the Doshisha was saved, and the fact that it is now a powerful intellectual and spiritual force in Japan under the presidency of Dr. Harada is due in a very large measure to the evangelical loyalty, wisdom, and persistent energy of Dr. Davis, who in one of the later chapters is fittingly characterized as the "All-Roman Missionary."

The Death of a Nation. By Abraham Yohannan. New York: Putnam, 1916. Pp. xx+170. $2.00.

While we are constantly hearing about the horrors that are being inflicted upon the Armenians, Jews, and Belgians, we hear nothing about the equally great horrors that are being suffered by the Nestorians or Assyrian Christians in Turkey and Persia. This is probably due to their "small number and lack of literary representatives." But while we are surrounded by horrors it is just as well to have the list as complete as possible. This book gives the history of the small sect of Nestorians who are designated the "Ever Persecuted." Then follows a "Chapter of Horrors" into the details of which we must not go. But even this chapter closes with the prayer: "May God forgive the Turks and Kurds, for they know not what they do!"

Rest Days—A Study in Early Law and Morality.

By Hutton Webster. New York: Macmillan, 1916. Pp. xiv+325. $3.00.

This volume presents the same characteristics as a previous book of Webster; it embodies wide reading now expected of ethnologists.